P.C. Boschmans informs:

A successful implementation of

ISO 13485: Medical devices

Quality management systems & Requirements for regulatory purposes

As an important step in its value chain, P.C. Boschmans invested in a total quality management system and recently achieved the status ISO 13485 certified. “The achievement of this certificate is a proof that customer requirements are met at the highest level and that our company takes responsibility for the manufactured components”, says Steven Keyzer, Quality and Regulatory Manager at P.C. Boschmans, “With a decent quality system in place, we manage all necessary records to guarantee identification and traceability of our products”.

With this certificate, the family company’s new generation is ready for the future. We expect business to grow as the demonstration of regulatory compliance has become a customer requirement. Driven by our passion for perfection, we are keen on the development of production processes for both new and existing components in dental and surgical applications or for general medical industries.
